Knight Tells Rotarians About Washington Meet

Local Rotarians Wednesday heard Sam Knight, former Yoeman football star, report on his attendance at the fifth annual National Symposium on the Presidency held in Washington, D. C.

Knight, who is at present a student at Prairie View A&M where he is attending on a Navy scholarship, told of meeting Vice President Gerald Ford and visiting the White House during the three-day symposium. Some 400 students from over the United States attended the affair.

Knight said he asked the Vice President "How do you think the trust can be put back into American politics?" Ford's answer was that he hoped Americans would not judge all politicians by the recent discoveries made of Watergate hearings.

KEYNOTE SPEAKER

Ford was the keynote speaker to the group after dinner. Knight said in his speech Ford spoke of our political system working so well that a "few rotten apples couln't turn our government sour."

Ford also said young people were needed in politics, and that he strongly favored the nation's two-party system. Speaking of his own office, Ford siad "it presents me with a unique opportunity, of legislative and executive departments, and is a counter-balance between the two." In ending he said, "the vice president must remain his own man," and he told the group, "your involvement will redeem America."

Round table discussions were held the next day and during that session, two men in Knight's group were Bruce Herschensohn, deputy special assistant to the President, and John K. Jessup, CBS commentator and former chief editorial writer for Life Magazine.

QUESTIONS OFFICIAL

Knight said he questioned Jessup on unemployment to which Jessup said the federal government should pay more attention to pockets of unemployment and not to passing a higher minimum wage bill which makes it worse. Jessup, also in answer to Knight's question, said he thinks the House will impeach Nixon.

On Sunday, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen gave the closing address to the students. In talking to Bentsen, Knight remarked on the fact that Bentsen is one of the prime contenders for the Democratic nomination for President in 1976. Bentsen said he was on speaking tours so his name will be familiar to the American public.

Bentsen also told Knight that he didn't watn a political label, he is for the people, not for a party.

High School Survey Reveals Drinking Habits

BELTON

A survey of high school students in the seven county regional area has revealed that four of each five students surveyed drink alcoholic beverages and that a high frequency of driving while drinking in some areas is fairly common among all high school students, according to the Central Texas Alcohol Safety Action Project.

The survey, conducted by the Central Texas Council of Governments agency, was to gain information about the drinking and driving habits of high school students, their alcohol and driving knowledge, and the alcohol education programs they are receiving and their interests.

Surveys were conducted, utilizing a questionnaire, in both rural and urban areas, and were administered to seniors in seven schools of the Central Texas area, including Bell, Coryell, Hamilton, Lampasas, Milam, Mills and San Saba Counties. Sample sizes varied from 100 percent of the seniors in some schools and 19 percent in others.

Milano High School in Milam County was surveyed.

Results showed that 26 and 27 percent of the students surveyed in two rural schools have over 40 percent of the students who drink the equivalent of 5 to 7 cans of beer each time they drink. Riding with a drunk driver is fairly common among all high school students, according to the data gathered.

A high percentage of all students surveyed do drive with regularity, but most rural schools had a slightly higher number of licensed operators.

Most high school students indicated a preference for beer, but more urban than rural students drink wine. According to urban students, most of their drinking is done at home, at a friend's house or at a party. Rural students said they drink while riding around in a car, at home, or some other place.

As many as one half of all students surveyed indicated that they had driven at least once while drunk or drinking heavily.

Students were not well informed on the involvement of alcohol in fatal accidents, the legal definition of alcohol in Texas, or knowledge of how to sober up. Although 80 percent of the students indicated that alcohol education is being received, up to 74 percent felt they weren't being taught enough, and approximately 15 percent stated they aren't being taught what they really want to know about alcohol.

Regionally, the survey revealed that the students themselves have experienced minor or no change in drinking habits as a result of the legal drinking age being lowered to 18.

Survey result reports have been provided to superintendents or principals of schools in the seven county area and to alcohol related agencies who deal with youth alcohol education. Reports have also been provided to federal and state agencies responsible for alcohol and traffic safety

PRICE DROP CONTINUES IN CATTLE MARKET

The bottom seems to be falling out of the cattle market as cattlemen saw prices dropping $2 to $5 per cwt last week following another drop the week before.

Biggest decrease in price received was in steer calves, which were down "the limit" at $5, according to word from the Cameron Livestock Auction report.

Receipts were down to 430 compared to 1,000 at this time last year and the report said demand was "moderate at best."

Slaughter cows and bulls were $3 to $4 lower and slaughter calves were $2 to $3 lower. Feeder heifers and heifer calves were also $3 to $4 lower and stock cows were mostly $3 lower.

Feeder steers brought $35 to $40 for choice and choice feeder heifers sold for $29 to $33. Last week the prices were $40 to $45 for feeder steers and feeder heifers were $34 to $37. Good and choice stock cows brought $24 to $29 for two to four year olds.

Cow and calf pairs were not tested.

What Cameron Is...

If we remember only how things were once done, they may never be done again.

Cameron has ignored its precedents. And so it is now a precedent for small communities everywhere who stick or are stuck with standard, legitimate, but inadequate ways to stabilize and to grow.

Buckholts, Rogers, Bremond, Calvert, Hearne, Rockdale, Temple, Bryan, Belton, Austin, Waco, Gatesville, Dime Box, Caldwell, Brenham, New Braunfels Hillsboro, Rosebud, Lexington, Thorndale, Marlin, College Station, Taylor, Georgetown and any other Texas town we are not.

Older than almost all of these, newer in concept than almost all of these, Cameron is.

What Others Say...

Hark, It's Too Quiet...

Did you ever suddenly become worried because all the noise around you came to a stop?

Well, the ladies' fashion industry is doing that to us this year.

Ordinarily there is some raging controversy over skirts that are too long or too short, a daring decolletage, pants that look to mannish, shoe heels that are too thin, too thick, too high -- or something.

But nobody's fussing about women's fashions at all. Something must be wrong. Did the streakers make all clothes talk seem meaningless?

Wooden Chinese Junk To Cross Pacific Ocean

By Alan Thomas

Reuter -- Eight men in a painstakingly built replica of a 2,000 - year old wooden Chinese jumk plan to sail 10,000 miles across the Pacific Ocean to Mexico to prove that Chinese seafarers could have landed on the American continent as long ago as 1,000 B. C., nearly 2,500 years before Columbus.

The craft, named Tai Ki, is a replica of a clay model of a Chinese junk found near the southern Chinese city of Canton in a grave of the Han Dynasty which lasted from 200 B. C. to 220 A. D.

It is made of entirely wood held together by bamboo pegs a perfect copy of junks built by ancient Chinese craftsmen some 2,000 years ago.

Skippered by 36-year-old Austrian adventurer, journalist and student of ethnology, Kuno Knobl, the Tai Ki's seven man crew will even stick to the traditional Chinese's seamens food of rice and fresh fish.

A traditional Chinese compass will be used for navigation and the only concession to the 20th century is a radio, to be used only in extreme emergencies.

The voyage, which starts later this month is expected to take six months, the Tai Ki should pass within 500 miles of San Francisco in mid-September and make its first landfall at the Gulf of Tehuantepec southern Mexico in late October.

The crossing will try to trace ancient Chinese crossings of the Pacific and prove that Asian seafarers could have landed on the American continent nearly 3,000 years ago -- so influencing the cultures of Central and South America.

Expedition leaders Knobl says: "We intend to report extensively on the trans-Pacific contact between Asia and the American continent in the years before Christ."

Knobl has been supervising the building of the Tai Ki in a Hong King boatyard for weeks. He and his crew aim to confirm that East Asiatic civilization penetrated America across the Pacific in junks exactly the same as the Tai Ki; whether Columbus or the Vikings discovered America from Europe is of no concern to the expedition.

They will simply hoist their bamboo matting sails and point the Tai Ki's solid bow eastwards.

The junk is 50 feet long, 18 feet wide and its hull is secured by 4,000 wooden pegs and bamboo nails. The living quarters are bamboo huts on deck. But if the run into typhoons or hurricans, the crew can move below deck with the provisions and ballast.

The route will take them past Taiwan and Okinawa and then eastward using the Kuroshiwo, North Pacific and eventually the California currents to speed their journey.

They should cross the International Dateline in mid-Pacific on July 28. The navigator is Carl Frederik Grange, a 43-year-ol Dane, who sailed from Denmark to Sweden at the age of 10 and was chosen for his country's 1972 Olympic sailing team.

Knobl supports his theory that the Chinese made the first crossing because of many similarities between the Asian and American continents.

The Dung-Sun culture in northeast Indochina corresponds closely to Andean and north Chilean cultures, particularly in decorations on metal objects.

Motifs on sculptures found in Peru match those on Chinese sculpture around 700 B. C., Knobl says. The people of both eastern Asia and the American continent used to carry sunshades as a sign of rank or symbol of royalty.

Knobl and fellow Austrian Arno Denning, 33, have been planning the voyage for eight years, an agricultural engineer, enning has travelled throughout Mexico and Central America collecting data for the expedition.

The forth member of the eight man crew is also a dane, 30-year-old Allan Karting, a pilot and navigator. The other four berths are yet to be filled.

Knobl believes transpacific contacts lasted from about 800 B.C. to 1,200 A. D. He is positive that there was great seafaring activity along the pacific coasts of America and Asia since the earliest of times.

"It might well be worth re-examining the assumption that the American continent was, more or less, isolated from the rest of the world for thousands of years," he says.

Chough birds were protected in Cornwall because the soul of King Arthur was fabled to have migrated into a chough.

British Firm Reproduces Collected Chaucer Works

By Michael Dobbs

LONDON

Reuter -- Some rare books are virtually impossible to purchase on the open market. A British firm has hit on the idea of reproducing them -- as close ot the original as possible.

The Basilisk Press was founded to produce limited editions of important books now unavailable. Museum treasures will become available to anyone -- that is anyone who can afford them.

The first book to be reprinted by Basilisk is the Kelmscott Press edition of the collected works of Geoffrey Chaucer -- the medieval English poet. This edition, which appeared in 1894, was hailed by the critics as "the noblest book yet achieved by any English printer."

The Kelmscott Chaucer is not just another rare book. It is a magnificently produced volume: the condensed gothic text is surrounded by floral borders.

The edition was designed by William Morris, the English poet and craftsman. The accompanying illustration by Sir Edward Burne-Jones are a superb example of pre-Raphaelite art.

William Morris spent years developing special paper for the Chaucer. Finally he produced a sheet modelled on a 15th century Venetian example, boasted to be "crisp and firm to the touch, like a Bank of England note," a virtually identical paper is being used in the new edition.

The Kelmscott Press sold 425 copies of the book -- at $50 a copy. Basilisk reckon this is roughly equivalent to $650 dollars at today's prices.

Basilisk are selling their edition of the Kelmscott Chaucer at $510 a copy. They consider it a fair price, considering the originals are changing hands in London sale rooms at over $6,250.

Basilisk Press is the brainchild of American-born Charlene Garry. She hopes Americans will be particularly interested in the books.

She claims the Basilisk Press is unique in its devotion to producing perfect replicas of original editions, "We don't mind how much it costs -- it has got to be right," she says.

Producing a perfect facsimile is a laborious process. The printers try to find paper, ink, and bindings as near to the originals as possible.

The actual printing is done by modern methods. The original edition has been photocopied and engraved on metal plates. It is then run off on a highly sophisticated printing press.

The result is hardly distinguishable from the first edition produced by the Kelmscott Press 80 years ago. The only visible difference is that the ink on the original has faded with age.

Mrs. Garry says customers for Basilisk books include collectors, libraries, and property speculators. Evidently the speculators are attracted by the prospect of the books appreciating in value.

"Nowadays anything beautiful is going to get more valuable," says Mrs. Garry.

Other volumes being prepared by Basilisk include the paintings of the English landscape gardener, Humphrey Repton, and Australian flower paintings of Ferdinand Bauer.

Repton created his so-called "red ooks" to show 18th century landowners how he could improve their properties. He painted them beautifully by hand -- but until now they have never been published.

Lamp Post Ads Offer Job Swap

By Jonathan Sharp

PEKING

Reuter -- In such a well ordered and disciplined society as China, it comes as a surprise to find form of unofficial employment advertising florishing on the city streets.

Denied the use of newspaper columns for personal and job advertisements, Chinese citizens use the street lamp posts instead.

"I am a worker in an electronic parts factory in Yin Chou. For family reasons I wish to move to Peking. If a comrade in a similar post in Peking wishes to exchange jobs please phone . . . "

So reads a typical "ad", hand-written on a small piece of paper and stuck beside half a dozen others on a lamp post near Peking's main railway station.

Most of the notices concern job exchanges where the "advertiser" is seeking to move to a similar job in another city.

But there are also some offering to exchange apartments, and one was seen in Shangahi recently asking if anyone had seen a lost wallet containing money.

The notices, small and inconspicuous, can be seen in substantial numbers on lamp posts near the railway station and also along Peking's main shopping street, Wang Fu Ching, and other major thoroughfares.

Almost all the notices seen in Peking are from people who want to come here, usually from cities within a radius of several hundred miles from Peking. But some are from as far afield as Chengtu in Szechuan Province in western China.

Boll Weevil Eradication Could Save Billions

With cotton prices and production costs at historic high levels in recent months farmers across the South and Southwest are renewing their pleas for an eradication program to banish the boll weevil forever.

"We have the knowledge to eradicate the boll weevil, once and for all time," according to Eugene Butler, editor-in-chief of progressive Farmer magazine, a nationally known farm leader who has fought the dreaded cotton pest since it crossed the border from Mexico in 1919.

A growing world market for cotton on the one hand, and some 160,000 Southern and Southwestern growers who have the capability to produce the quantities of cotton needed on the other, seem to bring together a combination of cicumstances calling for eliminating a pesky weevil that, without an effective control, will sock cotton growers with tens of billions of dollars in losses between now and the turn of the century.

Considering the damage it does and the cost to control the pest, the boll weevil eats his way through an estimated $500,000,000 worth of cotton in a bad year. This is enough damage to make cotton growing unprofitable on thousands of Southern and Southwestern farms where weevil attacks are most severe.

Butler believes 1974 may be a disastrous or expensive year to many growers across the South, because the mild winter allowed millions of weevils to over-winter in good condition and begin multiplying early.

The farm magazine editor warns of three dramatic losses if the nation fails to stop the boll weevil onslaughts:

1. Economic losses to the cotton industry of tens of billions of dollars in the next 30 years.

2. An other wise profitable cotton industry will be in jeopardy on millions of acres of Southern and Southwestern land, with dire economic and social effects on the communities where heavy losses occur.

3. Use of insecticides to keep boll weevils under some measure of control will continue at high levels, resulting in unnecessary pollution problems. Cotton requires more chemicals for keeping down pests than any other U. S. crop.

Mass chemical sterilization of laboratory raised weevils is one part of the plan for boll weevil eradication. Millions of sterilized males are released over wide areas, and when these mate with female weevils no offspring results. This same concept was used to eradicate screwworms from almost all areas of the nation during the past decade, saving U. S. consumers about a billion dollars a year in recent years.

A pilot test of a weevil eradication program in South Mississippi, Alabama, and Louisiana during the past two years has brought satisfactory results, Butler stated. Sterilization, traps, attractants, sprays, dusts, diapause treatments, (attacking weevils with chemicals just prior to their going into hibernation for the winter) and other methods were used in the eradication effort.

An estimated $650 million, to be spent over a 10-year period, would be needed to conduct the boll weevil eradication effort. Although that cost figure is rather frightening Butler agrees, the losses from failing to carry out such a program will be even more staggering.

Cotton growers in the South and Southwest harvest 12 million acres of cotton annually, about 90 percent of the nation's total. Income from cotton in these states totals around $2 billion a year, and this is the largest income from a single crop in the 18-state area.

Scientists Toast Alcohol As Fuel Crisis 'Solution'

WASHINGTON

The gasoline crisis may yet drive American automobiles to drink. Alcohol could be the fuel additive of tomorrow.

In this case it's wood alcohol -- methanol, methylated spirits, or methyl alcohol -- the poisonous, blinding drink of the unwary during Prohibition. It is bad for man, but tests indicate it is good for the automobile's internal combustion engine.

Two Massachusetts Institute of Technology scientists have run a car 10,000 miles on gasoline mixed with as much as 15 percent methanol.

The catch is that America's methanol production is only about one billion gallons a year for use in making plywood and plastics. The nation's annual consumption of gasoline is 100 billion gallons.

STARTLING FORECAST

Ever since the invention of the internal combustion engine, alcohol has been considered as a logical fuel.

In 1917 Alexander Graham Bell, who served as the National Geographic Society's president from 1898 to 1903, madea startling forecast:

"The world will probably depend upon alcohol more and more as time goes on," he wrote, "and a great field of usefulness is opening up for the engineer who will modify our machinery to enable alcohol to be used as the source of power."

Scientists also have endorsed Dr. Bell's ideas of how to make methanol. It can be produced from any organic material, such as garbage, feedlot and stockyard manure, and lumber mills' endless supplies of sawdust.

These are continually renewable sources of energy. But so far such production is considered too expensive, even though up to 1930 wood alcohol was chiefly made by distilling wood.

Natural Gas Byproduct

One proposal is to manufacture methanol from the natural gas produced with the oil in Alaska's North Slope. Adding methanol to petroleum, which comes hot from the ground, would -- according to this proposal -- drop the temperature of the pipeline and lessen the potential danger to the frozen environment.

Another idea calls for an choring methanol - manufacturing ships near Middle Eastern oil areas to process the natural gas produced with oil.

With natural gas reserves limited, the nation's enormous coal resources are seen as the most likely supply of methanol.

One engineer has suggested building 20 coal - gasification plants to produce methanol to stretch gasoline supplies. Each plant would cost $150 to $200 million, but would be no larger than modern gasoline refineries.

If a plant made 7 million gallons of methanol daily, it would probably cost 8.5 cents a gallon.

The Consumer Alert

by John L. Hill
Attorney General

AUSTIN

Vacation bound? There's a chance you might also be heading for trouble if you haven't taken certain precautions before leaving home.

Law enforcement experts and our Consumer Protection Division attorneys say that what is vacation time for most folks is working time for many burglars, pickpockets, and con men.

They suggest that you plan in advance to burglar-proof your home and to guard against possible thefts or consumer frauds on your trip. While the number of such occurrences is small compared to the number of vacationers, it only takes one bad experience to ruin a trip.

Here's a list of things to check before you leave:

-- Stop mail, newspaper, and other deliveries.

-- Tell a neighbor or your apartment manager that you will be gone and ask them to keep an eye on the place.

-- Leave a few lights on or buy an automatic timer to turn certain lights on and off each evening.

-- Cut your lawn just before leaving and, if you will be gone a long time, have someone cut it while you are away.

-- Check all windows and doors to make sure they are locked. A sliding glass patio door can be more securely fastened by wedging a stick at the top or bottom of the door.

-- Check with your local police if you plan an extended vacation. Many forces offer a "close patrol" of homes where persons are away. If your police force does, you will need to tell them what cars or persons, if any, will be making authorized visits to your house.

-- Have your telephone put "on vacation". Your callers will be told that the telephone has been temporarily disconnected at your request, and you can have them referred to another number if you wish.

-- Avoid mentioning to casual acquaintances or strangers that you will be on vacation. Also, avoid telling your newspaper's society editor of your trip until you have returned.

-- Before leaving, engrave all valuables in your home and those you will be taking with you in the car with your driver's license or social security number. Some police forces will loan you an engraver to mark your belongings and will register your number on their master list. This may discourage burglars from taking your goods and can make identification of recovered stolen goods much simpler.

Project To Establish Mallards

A $10,000 project to establish a resident mallard duck population in Texas has been initiated by the Pearl Brewing Company of San Antonio.

Company officials presented a $10,000 check May 20 to Ralph D. Churchill, chairman of the Texas Conservation Foundation, which with concurrence of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission would be used to purchase 20,000 mallard ducklings from the Frost Game Farm in Coloma, Wis.

The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department is to handle the biological end of the project.

The first shipment of 2,000 birds has already been flown to the department's management and research station in Tyler. They will be held there for three weeks until they get their flight feathers. They will then be released in specially selected spots throughtout Texas.

Once released, the ducks are on their own to establish a free living and/or nesting population in the release areas.

According to department officials, mallards were once prevalent in the Texas coastal area. But because of their migratory habits, the mallard population has moved north so that today they are found in greater numbers in the High Plains and Panhandle areas.

Department officials hope to "imprint" the birds so they will return to the release area each year for nesting. They also hope that the released birds will mate with wild mallards in order to get more wild blood into offspring of released birds.

Approximately 2,000 mallards will be released every week for 10 weeks. The first release date is June 10.

Mounted Police Due At HOT Fair

WACO

Something new, something entirely different has been announced for the feature rodeo attraction at the 1974 Heart O' Texas Fair, October 1-6.

The colorful Royal Canadian Mounted Police will perform their thrilling "Musical Ride" and charge seen by millions around the world and by huge turnouts the past month across Europe.

The Royal Canadian Mounties spent the entire month of May performing in England, Belguim, Germany, Switzerland, and Denmark. They will perform for a week in Paris, France, plus engagements in Essen, Germany and the Netherlands in June and across Canada in July and August.

They will perform for ten days at the Expo ' 74 in Spokane; at Pomona, California, and at Oklahoma City in September before coming to Waco for their five performances at the Heart O' Texas Fair. There will be no Sunday matinee.

Performed by a full troop of 32 men and horses, the "Musical Ride" is the execution of a variety of intricate figures and movements to music of appropriate tempo. Highlight of each performance is "The Charge" when the beautiful black horses stamp and fret impatiently as they await the chilling trumpet notes.

The black horses of the Musical Ride are raised at the Mounties' own breeding farm near Ottawa, Ontario. They are from registered thoroughbred stallions and Brood Mares ranging from three-fourths and to seven-eights thoroughbreds. These animals stand at 5.3 to 17 hands and weigh from 1,100 to 1,350 pounds.

Summer Sessions At Waco Art Center

An exciting array of classes is being offered this summer at the Waco Creative Arts Center. Morning, afternoon and evening classes, some for adults, others for all ages, will be taught on a rotating schedule. Most of the courses will be offered for two consecutive weeks; others from three days to one week. This flexibility will allow students to schedule classes around vacation times and avoid conflicts.

Morning workshops (9:30 to 11:30) include printmaking, pottery, designing with color, fabric design, movement, enameling, raku and others. In "box" students will make a variety of two and three-dimensional objects from the contents of a box full of "goodies". From June 24 through 28, Michael Blowen from Emerson College, Boston, will conduct his second film-making workshop. During the same week his wife Mildred will conduct a special workshop on masks and puppetry for teachers. July 1 - 3 Mrs. Blowen will teach 7 to 10 year olds how to make simple puppets to use in creative stories and dramatics.

"Box, " watercolor, film making, and silk screen will be offered from 1 to 3 in the afternoon. A drawing workshop and two painting workshops will be taught from 1 to 4 p.m.

Evening classes include sculpture, weaving, painting, pottery, film-making and special design problems.

Art Experience, a super workshop for children featuring multi-media explorations, will be conducted for eight Saturday mornings, beginning June 15.

Tuition for the courses ranges from $12 to $30, depending on the length of the course and the type of materials involved. Materials are provided by the Art Centers.

For more information on classes, schedules for scholarships, call the Art Center, 817-752-4371, or come by 414 Franklin.

A weekly public service feature from the Texas State Department of Health

Accent on Health

J.E. PEAVY, M.D., Commissioner of Health

Early detection of disease or a physical problem often can be the difference between a bright future or one filled with continuing medical problems.

Texas youngsters -- more than 150,000 of them to date -- have a better chance of good health through special medical and dental programs carried out by the Texas State Department of Health.

Preventive health services are being given Texas children through an agreement between the State Health Department and Department of Public Welfare. Those eligible for medical screening and dental diagnosis and treatment services are those youngsters on the Welfare Department's aid for dependent children rolls.

It is anticipated that the early detection and treatment of disease in children served by this program will have a significant impact on their lives now and in the future.

The program -- called the Texas Medical Assistance Program -- is designed to create awareness of existing health care services, to stimulate the use of these services, and to make services available so that children can receive medical and dental care before health problems become chronic and permanent damage occurs.

The dental program concept is to provide eligible children a certain level of dental care through utilization of services of private dentists in the state. The more than 68,000 children participating in this program have received examinations, preventive care, remedial, and emergency dentistry where necessary. A definite freedom of choice on the parts of both the recipient and dentist is strictly maintained. The Department of Public Welfare is responsible for identifying eligible children, obtaining and seeing that dental appointments are kept, and providing local administrative services to the program. The Health Department monitors the statewide program, provides a list of participating dentists for each county, issues and processes dental invoices, and maintains statistical data.

Red Baron Restored At State Tech

The red baron may fly again if permission to fly a restored Grumman AG Cat is permitted to the aviation maintenance program on the James Connally Campus of Texas State Technical Institute.

Students in the program recently rebuilt and painted the first two Grumman AG Cats which were manufactured in 1957.

The paint jobs are unique. One is painted the red baron while the other has the insignia of the American Volunteers, American pilots who flew for the French prior to World War I.

The two planes were agricultural crop - dusters. The planes, which were given to State Tech from Texas A&M University, are now operable. Students and an instructor are requesting permission from the State to take the planes to the air.

The one - year aviation maintenance program on the James Connally Campus has restored planes for the Mimitz Museum in Fredricksburg as well as working in the lab on the most modern aircraft being manufactured today.

Republicans Push Grassroots '74

WASHINGTON

Continuing efforts to turn out the maximum number of voters favorable to Republican candidates in the fall's elections, the Republican National Committee will sponsor from June 10 to July 15 a comprehensive program of instruction in the basics of political organization called GRASSROOTS '74.

The program, directed by RNC Co-Chairman Mary Louise Smith, is the most extensive to be held by the RNC in this election year. It consists of a series of 13 one-day seminars in voter identification, registration and turnout to be conducted in various cities across the country.

GRASSROOTS 174 is a sophisticated, scientific and proved program readilty adaptable for the election of Republicans in any area regardless of size or locale. The sessions, said Mrs. Smith, are open to all Republican Party and candidate organization leaders and workers who will be actively involved in the recruitment of volunteers and the preparation, implementation and final tabulation of get-out-the-vote operations.

"Party workers and candidate campaign workers from every county in the nation should be represented at one of the seminars," said Mrs. Smith. Particular attention will be given to registration and special ballot procedures, walking victory squads, kitchen table surveys, and the utilization of home telephones. Pertaining to election day activities, GRASSROOTS '74 attendees will be instructed in developing a check-off system at the polls and the use of fieldmen and supervisors.

In addition to Mrs. Smith, the seminars will be conducted by such political professionals as Mary Ellen Miller, Special Assistant to the Chairman and Assistant Campaign Director of the National Republican Congressional Committee; Edward Mahe Jr., Director of RNC Political Activities; Richard Thaxton, RNC's Director of Research, and Mrs. Connie Armitage, President of the National Federation of Republican Women.

Registration fee for the seminars is $15. Further information may be obtained from Mrs. Smith at the Republican National Committee, 310 First St. SE, Washington, D. C. 2003.

CLEAN HOUSE WITH A HERALD CLASSIFIED

'Right To Work' Committee Active

A new, state-wide citizens committee has been organized to inform the people of Texas of the principle of "right to work." According to committee chairman Dr. Abner McCall, right to work "guarantees every Texan the right to work without being forced to pay union dues."

Dr. McCall, president of Baylor University, and Mrs. Margaret Wisdom, Houston school teacher, head the Texas Right to Work Committee, which is composed of employees dedicated to providing public information on right to work provisions in the proposed Texas Constitution.

Mrs. Wisdom, a public school teacher for 25 years, said, "Our goals are twofold. First, we want to let people across the state know what right to work is all about, and, second, we want to urge citizens to express their opinions to their Constitutional Convention delegates.

"Union bosses," she said "have publicly vowed to destroy the entire work of the Constitutional Convention if right to work provisions are included. We believe right to work should be placed before the voters as a separate issue."

The state's present right to work statute was passed by the Texas Legislature in 1947. The law prohibits union contracts forcing workers to join a union or be fired. "During the 1973 session," Mrs. Wisdom said, "an attempt was made to emasculate that law by requiring non-union employees to pay the equivalent of union dues in order to keep their job. Because of such attempts on behalf of the unions, we believe our citizens right to work without paying dues to a private organization should be protected by our constitution."

"It is basic to our system of government," she continued, "that people be allowed to vote on matters which affect them and their futures. Right to work is one of those matters, and the system of democracy demands that voters be allowed to express their wishes."
